CALGARY'S
CULTURE HOUSE

HISTORY

In 1912, the city of Calgary, received its first major cultural gift, The Grand theatre, built by the visionary Calgarian, Sir James Lougheed.

The Grand was the initial home of many arts organizations in Calgary; the first theatre, opera, ballet, symphony concerts, and movies were seen here. This theatre was the centre of social, cultural, and political life in Calgary until the early 1960s when the Jubilee Auditorium was built. Slowly the theatre fell into disrepair and in 1979 it was slated for demolition.

In 2004, with a significant leading donation from Calgary philanthropist Jackie Flanagan and the vision of Mark Lawes, Theatre Junction was able to purchase and transform The Grand into one of the leading contemporary theatres in Canada.

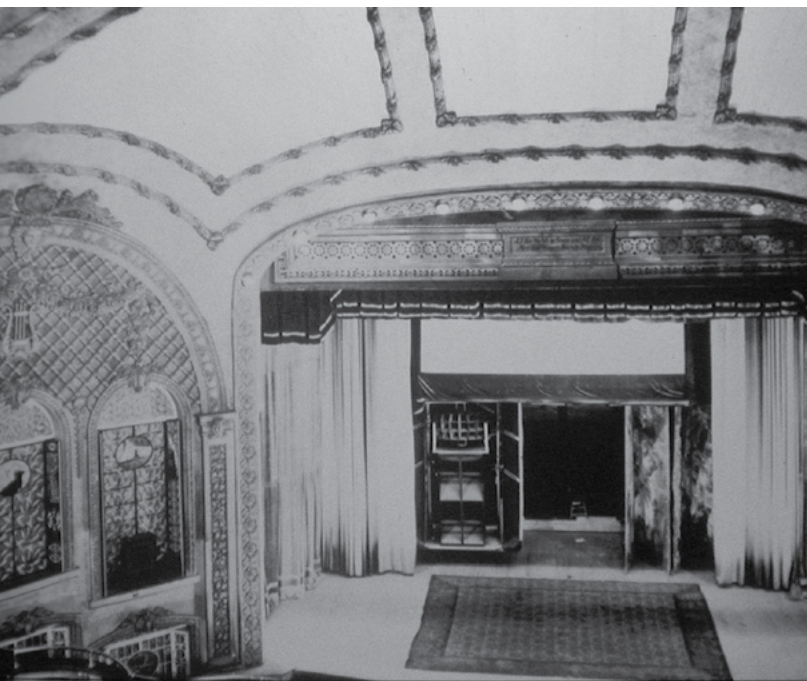

Theatre Junction GRAND opened in March 2006. Since then Theatre Junction has been creating new work in Calgary with a company of artists and presenting contemporary performance from across Canada and around the world.

Today Theatre Junction GRAND continues to stand as a monument to Calgary's cultural past, and remains a space for artists to envision the future.

ABOUT US

Theatre Junction is a crossroads for the exchange of art and ideas, where people, art forms and philosophies converge, creating a rich cultural landscape in the city of Calgary.

We are a place for CREATION, PRESENTATION, EDUCATION and PARTNERSHIP within the community, building diversity and vibrancy within our society, presenting local, national and international creation based artists to foster contemporary live arts within our city.
